A Happy Fellow.

He was the happiest fellow alive;
Don't care how trouble might try him;
Lovin' his brothers
An' doin' to others
Jest like he'd have 'em do by him.

Summer or winter—he still was content:
Don't care how corn was a sellin'.—
Wheat tumblin' over
An' "corners" on clover—
Trouble steered clear o' his dwellin'.

Sunshine or cyclone, it still was the same—
Never could phase him a minute;
Take all his money
An' skies were still sunny;
"Providence—providence in it!"

That was his sayin', no matter what come,
And when, with the love of a brother,
That counts not the loss,
Asks no crown for its cross—
He laid down his life for another.

He smiled—a brave smile!—'for his spirit took flight
To the heavens (he was worthy to win it!)
Passed under the rod
With a simple "Thank God!
Providence—providence in it!"

PAT-SKI'S MADNESS.

BY JOHN RUSSELL CORYELL.

"What is his name?" asked Farmer Green.

"Pat-ski," answered the interpreter at Castle Garden. There was a given name, and several syllables more of the surname, but in the course of their articulation Farmer Green had been unable to obtain a firm grasp on more than the two—Pat-ski.

"Mercy!" he exclaimed. "The boy 'ud surely be late to meals if I took the time to call him by his full name. D'you suppose he'd mind if I called him Pat-ski?"

"Call him anything you wish to," said the interpreter. "He won't care."

"Well," said Farmer Green, dubiously, "if you think so. I don't want to call him out of his name, but the whole of that would be too much for me."

"I'll tell him what you say," said the interpreter, and therewith he turned to the foreign lad, who had stood dully by without showing any interest in the conversation, and spoke to him in his own Polish tongue.

The boy, who was a sturdy, active-looking fellow, but with great melancholy eyes looking out of his olive-complexioned face, listened to the interpreter, uttered a few disdainful words, and made a gesture of indifference.

The interpreter turned to the farmer. "Call him what you like. He says he doesn't care."

"Umph!" ejaculated the farmer, looking doubtfully at Pat-ski. "He looks kind o' sulky. I hope he's not ugly-tempered."

"Oh no," answered the interpreter, reassuringly; "it isn't that. He's only homesick, and doesn't care whether school keeps or not."

"School!" repeated Farmer Green, with a puzzled air.

The interpreter laughed.

"That's just an expression," he said. "I mean the boy isn't interested in anything because he is homesick."

"Oh," said the farmer, "an expression! Yes, I see. I s'pose, now, my boys would ha' known what you meant. They pick up all those slang things." A troubled look came into his eyes. "They've taken to gadding nights a good bit lately."

"That's bad," said the interpreter, indifferently. He was not interested in the old countryman's boys.

"Oh, but they're good boys!" Farmer Green hastened to say. "And I know where they are—around among the neighbors."

"No harm in that, I should think," commented the interpreter, yawning.

"No harm meaningly," said the farmer, evidently speaking aloud some troublesome thoughts. "But you see, many of them are world's people—"

"World's people?" interjected the interpreter, inquiringly.

"Yes. I'm a Friend—what you would call a Quaker—and they are not. And I am sure they have piannas and organs among 'em, and dance and sing. I haven't asked my boys, but I'm afraid they jine in."

"I shouldn't wonder," said the interpreter. "Why don't you get a piano yourself, and let them do their dancing and singing at home, if you don't wish them to go out?"

"Ah!" sighed the old man, "that's just what my Bess is always saying. The last thing before I came away she begged me to get a pianna while I was down here."

"That's where her head's level," said the interpreter. "But you must excuse me, I'm wanted. You'll take the boy, will you? All right. I'll tell him."

And with a few words to the lad, he waved his hand carelessly to the old farmer, and hurried away.

"Head's level!" repeated the old farmer. "I think not. If my Bess hasn't as round and comely a head as an— But, there! I s'pose that's only one of them slang expressions again. No, a pianna is nothing but a device. First a pianna, then singing worldly songs, and then dancing. No, no, no! Come along, Pat-ski! Get your trunk, and we'll go."

Pat-ski understood the gesture and expression, and went to a corner where a miscellaneous lot of baggage was piled up, and procured a quaint old-fashioned carpet-bag, such as was common enough in this country fifty years ago.

They looked a strangely assorted pair as they went through the streets of the city together. But any one seeing the old farmer in his precise garb, and the boy in his shabby Polish dress carrying the carpet-bag, would have understood the situation at once. It was as plain as if it had been written on a placard that the farmer had come to the city to procure an immigrant boy at Castle Garden to take back to the country to work on his farm.

Josiah Green had been first attracted by the strong sinewy form and sturdy limbs of the boy, and had engaged him in consequence. But he was of a bright cheery nature himself, and he grew more and more troubled at the heavy and continued melancholy of the boy. And wondered more than once as he cast furtive glances at him, as he trudged stolidly along, if he had made a mistake in hiring him.

It certainly seemed very unnatural for a boy to evince as little interest as Pat-ski did, either in the bustle and strangeness of the great New World city of New York or in the scenery that was revealed as they hurried along in the train that was carrying them to the country home where gentle Bess was waiting for her father, and wondering if he had bought that longed-for piano for which she had begged.

The thought of Bess, indeed, together with the settled gloom on the dark boyish face by his side, combined to make that ride home a very dismal one for the old farmer. And he hardly knew whether to be glad or sorry, when he got out at his station, to see Bess by her brother Nathaniel's side on the front seat of the old spring wagon.

"Oh, papa! Did thee get the piano?"

The sweet voice, eager and expectant, was Bess's; but the old man saw plainly enough that Nathaniel was as interested as she.

"No, child, no!" he answered, a little irritably. "I told thee I would not. It is just a vanity and an aping of the world's people."

"Yes, papa, I know thee said thee wouldn't. I—I hoped maybe thee would—"

Her voice was beginning to grow tremulous, and she stopped with a little catch in her throat. Nathaniel kicked the dash board. The old man turned uneasily from Bess's downcast eyes to see that Nathaniel was staring with fixed fierceness at the colt's head.

"Here, you Pat-ski!" he said, abruptly, to the boy, "get in. In the front seat. Bess, thee sit behind with me. Did thee finish cutting that corn today, Nathaniel?"

"Yes, sir," said Nathaniel, and subsided into silence.

Pat-ski's face had lighted up a little—and whose would not?—at the sight of pretty Bess, but had resumed its melancholy in the presence of the evident constraint that had fallen on the party. He put his old carpet-bag in the wagon and took his seat by the side of Nathaniel, while the old man got in beside Bess, and took her plump hand affectionately in his. Bess turned her face up to him, making such a brave effort to smile, as if she had forgotten her disappointment, that Josiah Green found himself wishing from the bottom of his heart that he could see that it would be right to give her the piano she wished.

Nathaniel flicked the colt with the whip, and the spirited animal leaped forward so indignantly as to jerk Pat-ski over backward into Bess's lap, there being no back to the front seat. Bess blushed and laughed, and Pat-ski gathered himself up and took off his cap, apologetically.

"I think thee doesn't need to urge him, Nathaniel," said the old man, gently.

"I don't see what harm there is in a piano," said Nathaniel, irrelevantly.

"When thee is older thy judgment will be better, Nathaniel," said his father, without irritation now, for Bess, the peace-maker, was squeezing his hand.

For the remainder of the drive Bess and her father were the only ones who spoke. Nathaniel was determined to nurse his grievance, at least until they were home, so that he would be in tune for the indignation meeting with Peter and Elias in the barn; and Pat-ski, not only had no intelligible words to converse with, but had no wish to speak, anyhow.

That evening the indignation meeting was held, and "father's" unreasonable prejudice against dancing and singing was discussed with great bitterness and vigor. Bess came in while Nathaniel was holding forth. When he had finished with a long peroration on the harmlessness of dancing and the old-fogyism that would prevent it, she said, reproachfully:

"If thee knew how badly papa felt about the piano thee wouldn't say such things. He thinks he is right about dancing and worldly music and singing, and that is why he won't buy the piano. But he feels real badly about it."

"Oh, thee's too good for this world," said Nathaniel, sarcastically. "If thee had a harp and a pair of wings thee'd be fitted out, wouldn't thee?"

Bess made no answer to this, not being quick at retort, and Nathaniel was speedily ashamed to think he had said it; though, boy-like, he did not admit it, but rather showed it by being particularly sweet with Bess the remainder of the evening.

And that apparently was the end of the piano rebellion, though every one, excepting Pat-ski, continued to think and talk of it, including good Mrs. Green, who was secretly with the children in their desire. But only Bess knew that, and the boys would no more have expected help and countenance from her than from Pat-ski; and surely he was the last one to do anything for them.

Poor Pat-ski! He was hardly what Farmer Green called sulky, for he learned readily and eagerly the farm-work they taught him, and worked with a sort of vehement industry, so that no fault could possibly be found with him.

But if the thing were possible, his face grew more and more dull and heavy with melancholy, and when his day's work was ended he did nothing but mope, and, as Bess declared, stare at her. And he made almost no progress in learning English, in spite of every effort to teach him.

He went about with dull eye and drooping head, and often had to be spoken to twice before he heard; and at last Farmer Green became alarmed, and said a doctor must be called. So a doctor was called.

He asked a great many questions of Farmer Green, and a few of wondering Pat-ski. He felt the boy's pulse, and looked at his tongue. Sometimes he shook his head gravely, and sometimes he said, "Um! um!" And he looked puzzled all the while, until Farmer Green modestly said that Mrs. Green believed that homesickness was the trouble.

At that the doctor brightened and looked wise; and then drew out his tablets, and said he would write a prescription. Farmer Green watched him while he wrote something in an undecipherable hand, and began to feel still more alarmed for Pat-ski.

"What do you think is the matter, doctor?" he asked.

"It is undoubtedly a very severe case of nostalgia," replied he. "The worst case, I may say, that I have ever seen."

"You don't tell me!" ejaculated Josiah, in distress. "Nos— What did you say it was?"

"Nostalgia," replied the doctor. "Have this made up, and let him take it three times a day, before meals."

"Has it—has it," queried the old man, eyeing Pat-ski pityingly, "anything to do with the brain? We've been kind o' 'feared he might have some mental trouble."

"Oh, yes; mental," said the doctor sententiously. "Mental and nervous. But I think we shall bring him round in time—if he doesn't get worse."

In speaking of it afterward to the family, Josiah said:

"Of course it can't be anything that's catching, or the doctor would have said so; but if his mind's affected, we'd all better be careful, and thee in especial, Bess."

After that they all watched Pat-ski very closely, and he shortly discovered that he was being watched, which certainly did not tend to make his actions any less erratic, though he had no suspicion of the cloud he was under.

He took his nasty medicine and they compared notes, and it was wonderful how clearly they saw now that he did many strange things. In fact, it did not take kindly old Josiah long to make up his mind that something must be done. He could not desert the homeless stranger, but, on the other hand, he could not risk any harm coming to Bess through a sudden frenzy on Pat-ski's part. But while he was considering what to do the crisis came.

He and Bess had been to the village with the colt and buggy. Nathaniel took the colt to lead him to the stable, Peter and Elias were at work on the barn floor, and Pat-ski came forward to help carry the purchases to the house.

He threw the carriage robe over his arm and took a new axe out of the buggy. Somehow Josiah felt uneasy the moment he saw the shining implement in his hand, and started forward to take it from him. But as he did so a startling change came over the dull face of the Polish boy, and his actions were even more surprising.

His eyes lighted up and grew large and wondering, his lips parted, and his head was inclined to one side, as if listening. Then he emitted a sudden gasping cry, and leaped toward where Bess stood, preparing to go to the house.

But where Bess was concerned old Josiah was as quick and as bold as a lion. He saw her peril and threw himself on the boy. Pat-ski turned and a brief struggle ensued, during which Pat-ski dropped the murderous axe and freed himself from the old man and darted away at a run.

Bess screamed, but the boy did not notice her. He ran on down toward the house.

"Mamma! oh, mamma!" Bess cried frantically wringing her hands.

"The boys!" gasped Josiah, and started after Pat-ski.

"Peter! Nathaniel! Elias!" screamed Bess. The boys were already staring out at their father and Pat-ski. "He's gone mad," cried Bess. "Mamma! In the house!"

The boys understood, and sprang after their father with all the vigor of their sinewy limbs. The boy, however, did not stop at the house, but had passed it, and was already in the road when the boys reached their father.

"After him, boys! Mad! He'll do somebody an injury. Tried to kill Bess!" panted the old man.

The boys caught the words almost without stopping, and were presently in the road, speeding after Pat-ski. He never looked behind, but kept in the middle of the road, running at top speed. The boys did not gain on him, but they held their own.

Nathaniel turned back with an idea. He had tied the colt without unharnessing him. He would put him to the buggy.

About a quarter of a mile up the road Pat-ski leaped over the fence into a meadow. The cows grazing there raised their heads and watched the boy and his pursuers. Peter and Elias remembered hearing that insane persons had wonderful strength, and they believed it now as they saw Pat-ski, with apparently undiminished vigor, leap the fence into John Martin's vineyard and run up the slope toward the orchard.

"He's making for the woods by the creek," panted Elias.

"We'll never catch him if he gets there," said Peter.

They scrambled over the fence and staggered up the slope, pretty nearly winded by the run. There was a stone wall between the vineyard and orchard. Pat-ski went over it like a deer.

"Martin's man is there," gasped Elias.

"Hey! look out for him! he's mad!" yelled Peter.

"He doesn't hear," said Elias. "He's playing that old cornet of his. John Martin says he's everlastingly tooting on it."

"Pat-ski's got hold of him!" screamed Peter.

"He's biting him!" yelled Elias, looking around for a weapon and picking up a big stone.

Pat-ski, in fact, had run around in front of the cornet-player, had thrown his arms about wildly for a moment, and then had leaped on the musician, and certainly seemed to be biting him. By the time the boys reached the spot, however, Pat-ski had drawn back, and was laughing, crying, and talking all at once.

Peter saw his opportunity, and sprang on the Polish boy and caught his arms behind him, Elias standing ready to fell him with the stone he held at the first sign of Peter's inability to conquer him. But Pat-ski, instead of struggling, only stared for a moment at the two boys, and immediately resumed his excited talk with the musician.

"Did he hurt you, Lazur?" asked Elias, anxiously scanning the face of the man with the cornet.

"No," answered Lazur, gazing from one to the other in astonishment; "he did not hurt me. Why should he?" He used very good English, but spoke with a pronounced accent, for he was a Bulgarian.

He's mad, you know," said Peter, feeling very heroic in his successful battle with a madman.

"Here come father and Nathaniel and John Martin," said Elias. "We've got him, father," he cried excitedly. "He was just going at Lazur when Peter caught him."

"Poor fellow!" said old Josiah, panting with his exertions. "I s'pose we'd better tie him. Let me have that rope, Nathaniel. He seems quiet enough now, though. Why, Lazur, do you understand his lingo?"

Pat-ski and Lazur were talking with great earnestness, Pat-ski still crying and laughing, but evidently not dangerous. Lazur, a handsome, soldierly-looking Bulgarian, turned to Josiah, and said, earnestly:

"The boy is a Pole. He is not crazy—not at all, unless you say he is crazy with delight and joy. He says he has been so sick for his old home, and for the dear mother who died just before he came away, that it seemed to him as if his heart was dead inside of him. Then all at once he thought he heard a message from heaven. But it was not that; it was this old cornet on which I was playing an old Polish hymn, which his mother used to sing to him when she put him to bed when he was a little boy. When he knew it was not from heaven, but was made by somebody over here, he came quickly so that he might find me. That is all. Ah! I know what that feeling is. I am alone, too, and I come out here to make this very horrible music because I must get back home somehow; and it seems to me when I play ever so badly, I am back with the mother and little sister again."

He was a strong man, and had seen war and bloodshed but a tear trickled down his face as he spoke. Old Josiah coughed and blew his nose, and Peter slowly and shamefacedly loosed his hold of Pat-ski.

"I think, boys," said the old man, "that maybe we'd better let Pat-ski stay here a bit with Lazur, so's they can have it out together. Lazur, send him home by-and-by, will you?"

And the change in Pat-ski after that meeting with Lazur was so marked that he was like another person, so bright, gay, and cheerful was he.

One day, about a month afterward, when Bess and the boys reached home from the district school, they were met by their mother on the kitchen porch, her eyes all aglow with excitement.

"What's the matter, mamma?" cried Bess.

"Go into the parlor! Thee and the boys go straight into the parlor!" was all Mrs. Green could say; and they dropped their books and ran, she following.

A beautiful brand-new upright piano stood against the wall. The glittering white and black keys; and old Josiah, beaming from every line of his face, sat on the sofa gazing eagerly into the face of Bess.

"Oh, papa!" murmured Bess, and dropped down by his side and put her head on his knee.

"I thought maybe thee was right about the music, Bess, so I got the piano. I suppose thee may thank Pat-ski for getting rid of an old man's prejudice. Mother has been that way of thinking for a good bit, but I was sort of obstinate, I guess.

"Thee'll find some worldly songs there, too, boys, and a book or two of hymn tunes."

HAPPENINGS IN FRANKLIN AND ADJOINING COUNTIES.

Gleaned From Our Exchanges—The News of the Cumberland Valley and Southern Pennsylvania, With a Few From Beyond Mason & Dixon's.

In Germany 6,626 cases of diphtheria have been treated by serum inoculation, 2,460 of them in hospitals, according to a report of the government medical department. Of these 86.5 per cent. recovered, 12.9 per cent. died, and the rest were still under treatment. In the hospitals alone the cures were 80.5 and the deaths 19.5 per cent. The remarks attached to the reports of the cases were highly favorable to the treatment in 4,871 and unfavorable in 60.

An audit of Altoona's city lien dockets, which was finished by Controller Harpham, Monday night of last week, shows a shortage of $12,800 in the accounts of William A. Ambrose, the absconding city solicitor. His real estate, which is valued at $50,000, is mortgaged for all it is worth. The building and loan associations for which he was solicitor are said to have lost about $12,000 by his proceedings. Persons who indorsed his notes and those who placed money in his hands to satisfy judgments or for investment contribute $10,000 more to the total of $90,000 of which Ambrose is reported to have defrauded the city and his clients. Among the unfortunate victims is Miss Lizzie Akers, a school teacher who had given him $1,000 of her money to invest.

Ex-Judge John A. Baker died at his home in New Bloomfield, Perry county, on Monday evening, Dec. 2nd. When he retired from the editorship of the Perry County Freeman in December of last year he was probably the oldest editor in the State, having been in continuous service in that paper for 55 years. He was 80 years of age. A dispatch from Fort Scott, Kansas, tells of the death there on Wednesday, Dec. 11, of Frederick O. Baker, a prominent railroad contractor. He was a brother of Judge Baker, and he died just after he had received the news of his brother's death. There was only a small difference in their ages. Frederick Baker was married to Miss Margaret Anderson, of Carlisle, who survives him.

The Huntingdon Local news of Thursday last has the following to say complimentary of a gentleman well known in the vicinity of Chambersburg: "Prof. Ezra Lehman, who has been the efficient principal of the High School in this place for four years, has accepted the chair of Rhetoric and English Literature at the Shippensburg Normal School and tendered his resignation to the board of directors, to take effect January 13th. We regret our friend has decided to leave Huntingdon, and in this we speak the sentiment of the pupils of his school and the public generally. May success attend him in his new field, for which he has the acknowledged ability."

Mrs. Charles Wilbur, of Harrisburg, was fatally burned on Tuesday of last week by the explosion of a gasoline can which she was holding in her hand. The explosion was terrific, every pane of glass in the kitchen being broken and the clock being thrown from its shelf. The house was set on fire, but neighbors extinguished the flames before much damage was done. The deceased was fifty years of age. Her husband was burned about the hands in attempting to tear the burning clothing from the victim and his hair and beard were singed. A daughter, Miss Lillian Wilbur, who is now a teacher in Lancaster county, is a graduate of the class of '90 in the Cumberland Valley normal and has many friends in Franklin and Cumberland counties.

Charles Hinkle, son of Rev. Richard Hinkle of the Central Pennsylvania Conference of the M. E. church, died suddenly in Baltimore a few days ago. Rumors were afloat that the young man had committed suicide, but the following communication from the father, residing at York, to the Philadelphia Press, contradicts that theory: "In justice to the memory of my son, Charles M. Hinkle, and in deference to the feelings of my family and his many friends, by whom he was so tenderly and deservedly loved, I desire to say that the statements of "The Press" as to the manner of his death are without foundation; in fact it being the result of accident, not design."

A decided novelty in the way of piano casing is being introduced by a Milwaukee music dealer. After several years of study and experiment the inventor decided that leather was the most attractive, as well as the most durable, casing for pianos. The color of leather selected for the first specimen instrument was a rich black, handsomely embossed, giving the impression of exquisite carving. Not only does the instrument thus encased present a most attractive and dignified appearance, but does not mar or spot like the ordinary varnished surface.

The treasures of the Bank of France are said to have more precaution taken for their security than those of any other bank in the world. At the close of business each day, when the cash is deposited in the subterranean vaults, masons at once wall up the doors with hydraulic cement. Water is then turned on until the vault is flooded. In the morning the water is turned off and the masons remove the mortar before the business commences for the day.

It may not be generally known that wooden shoes, such as worn by the Hollanders for ages, are now manufactured in the United States at Grand Rapids, Mich. The product is about three hundred pairs of shoes per week, which calls for fifty cords of bass wood cut to stove length. The wood costs two dollars per cord, and one cord is good for sixty pairs of shoes. The billets of wood are roughly shaped with axe and adze and a finishing machine perfects the shape. They are then operated on with gouge, augur, bores and knives that look like mustard spoons, and in an hour the shoe is ready to go to the drying room. The finishing touches are put on when dry. The shoes are shipped to all parts of the country, and the demand for them is increasing. The American farmers appreciate the fact that the Hollanders had pretty level heads when it came to a question of comfort while working in wet places. The shoes do not absorb the moisture, and are much more comfortable on the feet than they look, when once the wearer has become accustomed to them.

The Pomona Grange of Juniata county meets in East Waterford, today and to-morrow, 26th and 27th. This evening's session and those tomorrow will be open to the public. A grand program has been arranged containing subjects interesting to farmers. A public meeting will be held at Waterloo tomorrow evening, the 27th, to be addressed by W. F. Hill, the State lecturer and others. Lecturer D. B. McWilliams has called the meeting.

Mailed the Wrong Letter.

Back in the '70s, when Zach Chandler was at the head of the Interior Department, a young man from one of the Western states came to Washington to try clerical life in one of the departments. He had been quite a ward politician in his Western home, and imagined both the Senators from his state would be glad to do him a favor. He spent several days taking in the sights at the capital, then went up to the Senate one afternoon and sent up his card to Senator Blank. The Senator responded promptly, had the visitor shown into the marble room, and for some time they sat on the sofa together, talking of home news and the home crops. Then the young man broke the ice by informing the Senator just what kind of a place he wanted—didn't care much what department it was in.

"Well, I don't know," said the Senator. "Such places are not to be found every day, and there are hundreds here from about every state in the Union looking for almost anything in the shape of an appointment.

"Come up to my house about 8 o'clock tonight," said the Senator, "and we'll talk the matter over."

Promptly at the appointed time he pulled the door bell, and was ushered into the library, where he found the Senator puffing a cigar.

"Ah! Good evening, Mr. ——; I was just thinking of you." said Senator Blank. "I have written a strong letter to Secretary Chandler requesting him to give you a position in the Interior Department," picking up an unsealed letter from his desk and handing it to the young office seeker, "and I would suggest that you call at his office and present it about 10 o'clock to-morrow morning. I have also mailed the Secretary a little note, letting him know that when I want anything in his office I want it badly."

The young Westerner was bowed out of the room with smiles and a hearty handshake. At his hotel he sat down to think over his good luck; then he thought of the Senator's letter, and pulled it out of his pocket and read:

"Dear Chandler: Some time tomorrow morning a young citizen of my great and glorious State will call on you with a strong endorsement from me for a clerkship. I have no earthly interest in him, so I turn him over to your tender mercy. Let him down easy. Yours,

"Blank."

The young man dropped the letter, and a big sigh struggled up from under his watch pocket. "I wonder what he said in the little note he mailed to the Secretary?" thought the young candidate. Then he realized that the Senator had given him the wrong letter, and he at once determined to call at the Interior Department the next morning and see what the next chapter would bring forth.

About 10 o'clock the next forenoon the colored messenger showed the young man into Secretary Chandler's office.

"Senator Blank told me last night he had written you and advised me to call on you this morning," said the young gentleman.

"Ah, yes," smiled the Secretary, good-naturedly, picking up from his desk an open letter and glancing over it. "The Senator speaks of you in the highest terms, and is very urgent in his request for your appointment. Wait a moment," and, touching a bell, he sent for the chief clerk. After a moment's conversation with the chief clerk the Secretary said.

"You are fortunate. There is a $1,200 clerkship vacant by resignation this morning, and I have ordered your appointment to the place."

A month later Senator Blank was walking through the Patent Office and in the corridor met the new clerk in his office coat. The Senator was surprised and a trifle disconcerted, but he shook hands with his young friend and said he was glad to see him there.

"Well, I'm glad to be here, responded the clerk. "And, Senator," putting his hand inside his vest and looking squarely in the other's eye, "right in my inside pocket I keep that little personal note you thought you mailed to Secretary Chandler telling him that when you wanted a thing you wanted it bad."

Explanations were unnecessary. The Senator went out of public life and died long ago, but the clerk manages to squeeze along through the hard times on his $1,200 a year.

A Dairymaid's School.—The Agricultural Department of the University of Minnesota has tried the experiment of a special summer term for a course of dairy work and domestic economy. Sixty women, their ages ranging from fourteen to forty-five years, attended from city and country. Six lectures were given daily, with practice in butter and cheese making and cookery.

Slipping Away.

They are slipping away—these sweet, swift years,
Like a leaf on the current cast;
With never a break in the rapid flow,
We watch them as one by one they go
Into the beautiful past.

As silent and swift as a weaver's thread,
Or an arrow's flying gleam;
As soft as the languorous breezes bid,
That lift the willow's long golden lid,
And ripple the glassy stream,

As light as the breath of the thistle-down,
As fond as a lover's dream;
As pure as the flush in the sea-shell's throat,
As sweet as the wood-bird's wooing note.
So tender and sweet they seem,

One after another we see them pass
Down the dim lighted stair;
We hear the sound of their steady tread
In the steps of the centuries long since dead,
As beautiful and as fair.

There are only a few years left to love;
Shall we waste them in idle strife?
Shall we trample under our ruthless feet
Those beautiful blossoms, rare and sweet,
By the dusty ways of life?

There are only a few swift years—ah, let
No envious taunts be heard;
Make life's fair pattern of rare design,
And fill up the measure with love's sweet wine,
But never an angry word.

THE PHILADELPHIA LEDGER remarks sententiously but significantly: "Several of the States are beginning to apprehend the meeting of their Legislatures."

A HAPPY NEW YEAR to all our readers. In making the customary "good resolutions" which are usual at this season, the best are those in which the maker resolves to be less selfish and more useful to his fellow men. Accummulating—absorbing—does not bring the highest or best gratification. That is oftener found in dispensing—distributing. By resolving to make others as happy as possible you will greatly increase your own happiness. There is as much virtue in resolving to do the right things as in refraining from doing the wrong things.

THE FOLLOWING named gentlemen are the chairmen of the various committees of the House, as appointed by Speaker Reed: Foreign affairs, Hitt of Illinois; ways and means, Dingley of Maine; appropriations, Cannon of Illinois; banking, etc., Walter of Massachusetts; coinage, etc., C. W. Stone, Penna.; naval, Routelle, Maine; military, Hull, Iowa; judiciary, Henderson, Idaho; civil service reform, Brosius, Penna.; education, Grow, Penna.; pensions, Loudenslager, N. Y.; war claims, Mahon, Penna.

SHERIFF JONES has under his care a vagrant named McFadden who served over four years in the late war as his discharge shows. In June last his pension of $6 per month was taken from him. He is 57 years of age and it is plainly evident that he is unable to earn his own living. Such cases help to fill our jails with tramps and vagrants whom the government should take care of. It is a remarkable fact that we rarely hear of a pension being taken from a man of wealth or influence. These cases do not seem to be scrtinized so closely as those of the poor who are scarcely more than paupers.

ON FRIDAY President Cleveland sent a special message to Congress on the financial situation. Among other things he says: "The real and sensible cure for our recurring troubles can only be effected by a complete change in our financial scheme. Pending that the Executive branch of the Government will not relax its efforts nor abandon its determination to use every means within its reach to maintain before the world American credit, nor will there be any hesitation in exhibiting its confidence in the resources of our country and the constant patriotism of our people." This will likely be taken to include in a nutshell all that he has said heretofore on the matter of finance and the tariff, and is a reaffirmation in brief of his formerly expressed opinions and purposes on these matters.

THE PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER of Thursday last gives Hon. A. Nevin Pomeroy a strong endorsement for the State Senate. Mr. Pomeroy in referring to the article says he is not a candidate for the Senate. He desires to be returned to the House. The Inquirer's article is probably based on the number of testimonials recently collected and published in the Repository, all of which commend Mr. Pomeroy's course in the last legislature. The contest for the nominations to the next legislature, before the coming county Republican convention promises to be quite animated. As Representative Pomeroy has proven himself a hustler and by this means secured his last nomination it is not improbable that he will make it again. If good words from fellow members count for anything, he certainly starts out with a strong endorsement.

THE STRIKE ENDED.

After an ugly riot in the morning in which two men were shot, a number clubbed, others hammered with stones and still others otherwise injured; many car windows smashed, obstructions piled upon the streets and other damage done to property, the great street car strike in Philadelphia ended on Monday. A conference was had between the employers and the employees and the difficulties were finally adjusted. The carmen went to work Tuesday morning and travel was resumed as usual, much to the gratification of the business people and the traveling public.

It is to be hoped that hereafter the Traction Company and its people will be able to adjust their difficulties, if any should arise, before there is so much loss to business and to working men. Nobody is richer, but all are poorer because of this strike. The company say they will treat with their men at all times, but not with the leaders of labor organizations. This seems to be satisfactory to their working men.

BARDSLEY NOT PARDONED.

The time for the pardon of John Bardsley has evidently not come yet if it comes at all. The plea of Attorney Alexander in his behalf before the pardon board last week, was as strong as it could be made and quite plausible. It astonished some people in the statement giving the names of prominent persons who had signed the petition for the pardon. There has always been the feeling since his conviction that Bardsley should not be suffering alone—that there are others equally if not more guilty than he.

There is, no doubt, some personal sympathy for Bardsley, and there are probably a number of persons who would feel safer themselves if he were out of prison; therefore, it is probable that the late effort is not the last one that will be made to secure his release. Whether future efforts will be more successful is hard to say. It is not probable, however, that public sentiment will favor his release before he has served the full term for which he has been sentenced, and it will require a stronger plea than has yet been made to influence a pardon board. There is not likely to be any more Kemble business by that body.

WHERE IT COMES FROM; WHERE IT GOES.

The total receipts of the state treasury during the last fiscal year, ending November 30, were $11,746,411,10. The largest amounts were: Tax on corporation stock and limited partnerships, $3,537,840,65; on bank stock, $514,074,27; foreign insurance companies, tax on premiums, $513, 616, 19; tax on loans (corporations), $822,281,76; tax on personal property (threefourths to be returned), $2,307,936,32: tax on collateral inheritances, 191,993,05; mercantile licenses, $532,294.00; wholesale liquor licenses, $437,064,21; brewers' licenses, $115,366,16. The tax on land amounted to only $2,160,20. Conscience money furnished $36,25. Fines for Sabbath breaking brought $119 to the sinking fund. The largest expenditures were; Legislature, $590,123,27; judiciary, $594,-510,77; printing, $243,046,47; public grounds and buildings, $228,356,50; hospitals and insane asylums, $609, 380,99; charitable institutions, $1,-034,204,66; common schools, $6,117,-261,56; soldiers' orphan schools, $225,688; national guards $378,501,-23.

"IN TIME OF PEACE PREPARE."

Senator Chandler of New Hampshire, and Representative Grout of Vermont, have promptly seized the occasion of the Venezuelan dispute to teach the country an impressive lesson. They have introduced bills in their respective Houses appropriating $100,000,000 for war material. With this amount they contemplate the procurement of 1,000,000 infantry rifles, 1000 field guns and 5000 heavy guns for fortifications, and Grout's bill proposes to raise the money by issuing a two per cent. popular loan. This great sum of money, it must be noted, is only for armament, and only a partial armament at that, for an army needs many things besides rifles and cannon. It does not even provide for ammunition to make the guns available, but that is not so important, since it can be prepared in a shorter time. These gentlemen have shown the country the weak point of the American situation. The President can raise an army in 24 hours, by issuing a proclamation, and can transport it to any threatened point in 24 more, but he could not arm it, and the making of guns takes a long time. We should procure this armament, whether we are going to use it or not, for there is no telling how soon we shall need it, and when we do, we shall probably need it in a hurry.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Greencastle Loses the Wagon Works.

There is no longer any doubt that the Auburn Wagon works will leave Greencastle and go to Martinsburg, West Va. Work on the new buildings will begin about January 1. Two of these will be put up as quickly as possible; they will be substantial and of commodious size. A number of the employees of the company, now residing in Greencastle, will go with it to Martinsburg. There are orders in now for 1,700 wagons and they are being built at the rate of 100 a week. It is a pity that Greencastle and Franklin county should lose an industry so valuable and which has grown so rapidly.

TOWN AND TOWNSHIP.

The Events of the County as Chronicled by "Review" Correspondents—Summary of the Week's News.

LURGAN.

Charley, son of William Patterson of Roxbury, was kicked in the face by a mule on Sunday last. He and his brother were playing in the yard where the horses and mules were. He was unconscious when picked up and was found to be pretty badly hurt. Dr. Stoey of Roxbury, dressed the wound. The boy is getting along very well.

Miss Ida Mowrey teacher of State Road school, Lurgan township, delivered a very excellent recitation at the L. L. S. on last Friday evening.

Mr. W. G. Clippinger of Lebanon Valley College, is spending his vacation with his parents.

A Christmas entertainment was held in the M. P. church on Tuesday evening of this week.

The pupils of Centre school presented their teacher, J. E. Fortna, with a very handsome fountain pen for a Christmas present. Mr. Fortna is one of Lurgan's best teachers and this shows that his work is appreciated by the school.

SOUTHAMPTON.

A happy event occurred in Southampton township on Thursday last, December 19. It was the occasion of the marriage of Miss Clara R., youngest daughter of Isaac Killinger, to W. A. Gise, the accommodating clerk at Southampton warehouse. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride at 3 p. m and was performed by Rev. L. T. Snyder of Orrstown. The wedding march was played by the minister's sister, Miss Emma T. Snyder. Quite a number of guests were present to witness the ceremony and congratulate the happy couple. Afterward all were invited to the dining room to enjoy a most excellent repast, such as Mr. and Mrs. Killinger are famed for serving, and all did ample justice to it.

The newly married couple are most worthy people and have the hearty good wishes of many friends that they may have a long, useful and happy life together.

The streams are so low that the mills are compelled to use steam power. Many of the wells are still dry, though the heavy rain on Saturday evening filled up the cisterns. Very rarely do we have heavier thunder or more vivid lightning than that which accompanied the rain. There was but little wind, so there was no damage done.

There was a very pleasant Sunday school entertainment in the Evangelical Lutheran church in Orrstown on Christmas eve. There were musical and literary exercises and the entertainment concluded with giving gifts to the members of the school. All were much delighted with the occasion.

QUINCY.

The B. & C. V. R. R. Company has rented one of the large corner rooms in F. C. Strite's dwelling house, Five Forks, and will use it as a temporary ticket office and waiting room. A new warehouse will be erected there.

Adam Rock has been lying ill at his home the past eight days with the grippe. He has been very sick for a few days, but we hope he will soon recover again.

We wish all the readers of your valuable paper a "Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year."

John Micener, Sr., Friday last raised a log dwelling house on the lot which he recently purchased from Frederick Monn. The building is 15x20 feet. Mr. Micener intends completing it by April 1, next.

S. J. George, Five Forks, has been appointed ticket and freight agent of the B. & C. V. R. R. Co. in place of S. S. Wingert, resigned. He is a young man of excellent character and habits and will make a most competent official. A better selection could not have been made.

David M. Hamsher, Cumberland county, last week slaughtered four large hogs. A casing measuring 56 feet was prepared and stuffed by Mrs. Hamsher, Mrs. George Skelley and Mrs. Comerer and they want to know if anybody in Franklin county can beat this. Yes, Franklin county can. One day last week Mrs. Mary Pfoutz, Five Forks, slaughtered two hogs that weighed, dressed, 416½ and 375 pounds. The casing of the larger measured 63 feet, 9 inches, and was prepared and stuffed by Mrs Pfoutz's youngest daughter, Mrs. Susie Strite, who can compete with any woman in old Cumberland when it comes to making long sausages. Martin E. Caufman was head butcher. F. C. Strite assisted him. D. W. T.

Our Public Schools.

Dr. Schaeffer State Superintendent of Public Instruction, has issued his annual report for the year ending June 1 last. During the year there were 25,848 schools open in the state, the terms varying from six to ten months. There are over 800,000 foreign-born persons in Pennsylvania, many of whom need the patriotic influences of the public schools.

The law making education compulsory is regarded as the most far-reaching of all recent laws. If Pennsylvania were to follow the example of Wisconsin in making a liberal appropriation in aid of all high schools maintaining a given standard, the greatest want in our system of public instruction would in no long time be supplied by the multiplication of high schools in rural districts and by the increased efficiency of the secondary instruction in cities and boroughs. Nearly $19,000,000 has been expended for the maintenance of the schools. The effect of the Religious Garb act has been to exclude nuns or sisters from the ranks of teachers.

Acquitted of Murder.

After a trial lasting a week in the Huntingdon county court, Joseph and Wesley McCracken, were acquitted on Tuesday of last week, of the murder of George M. Hawn. The case was given to the jury at half-past four in the afternoon and at half-past eight they returned with a verdict of not guilty. The case had been on trial since Tuesday, the 10th inst., and was fairly and impartially tried. That Elmer and Joseph McCraken were not convicted of murder in the second degree, the same as their brother Wesley, whom they allege did not do the shooting, is because of their plea that they shot to frighten the White Caps, and didn't know they had shot anyone at the time. This verdict virtually acquits Wesley.

Wednesday morning the defendants were discharged from custody and Wesley McCracken, convicted at the September sessions of being an accessory on the charge of murder, was granted a new trial, and released on $2,000 bail, John E. Wilson of McAlevy's Fort, Henry Meckbaugh and W. E. Marlin of Huntingdon, becoming his sureties.

A BUSY CONGRESS.

Speaker Reed Announces His Committees —Hon. Thad. M. Mahon Chairman of War Claims—Financial Measures to Be Adopted—No Holiday Recess.

Speaker Reed on Saturday announced the committees who will have charge of the business of the current session of the lower House of Congress. Hon. Thad. M. Mahon has been properly honored with the chairmanship of the committee on war claims. Judging from Mr. Mahon's activity in former sessions there can be no doubt that his being chairman of this committee will give our people a better prospect of having their claims for losses during the war considered than they have had heretofore. Aside from the chairman the composition of the committee is as favorable as it ever has been to having these just claims properly recognized and paid. It consists of seventeen members, five of whom are Democrat, and these are "Southern brigadiers." A plan different from those heretofore pursued will be taken to secure the payment of the claims. Instead of introducing a bill appropriating money for their payment, they will present a bill providing that the claims be put before the court of claims for adjudication and the testimony that has been taken before state commissions or other bodies to show the genuineness of the claims, shall be accepted as legal testimony before this court and it shall thus be determined what amounts are right. The matter will then, after having been adjudicated by the court of claims, go before the U. S. supreme court which shall determine finally whether the government shall pay the losses.

There are recent precedents by other governments for the payment of such claims, and a number of eminent jurists in our own country, among the greatest of whom is Judge Black, who believe that the government is bound to pay these claims.

Under the plan stated by Mr. Mahon, it will probably be a good while before the matter is finally determined by the supreme court but it will, in the end, probably be the most satisfactory and indeed, the only way of having it decided once for all.

With the exception of the short session of 1882-3 the present is the only congress for many years that will have continued its sessions right through the holiday season. This continuous sitting is made imperative, almost, by the condition of the treasury and the necessity for securing its relief—and also by the present Venezuelan imbroglio.

Mr. Mahon came home Saturday and returned yesterday—Christmas—in answer to a telegram stating that the matter for the relief of the treasury would be taken up this—Thursday—morning. As at present understood, the plan proposed by Speaker Reed is to save from the appropriation bills—rivers and harbors etc.—$60,000,000 and to modify the tariff so as to add $50,000,000 to our revenues. This will make a saving of $110,-000.000. The tariff is to be raised to something like the provisions of the McKinley bill on wool, manufactured lumber, tin plate and a few other articles, then there will be on the remainder of the Wilson bill schedules a horizontal raise of 25 per cent. When questioned as to his opinion whether or not Mr. Cleveland would sign such a bill he remarked: "This is a Republican congress. The President in repeated messages has asked congress to afford the country financial relief, which must be had immediately. This is the plan that congress believes best and we shall adopt it or some modification of it and leave the responsibility of approving or rejecting it with him. If he does not sign the bill he may allow it to become a law without his signature, it seems hardly possible that he will veto it."

As to the effect of the Wilson bill upon the volume of our gold, as contrasted with the McKinley bill the following comparison is made: "In a given period under the McKinley act we received in a given time, or during the thirty months the act was in operation an increase of $800,000,000 in gold—duties on goods imported. During the time the Wilson bill has been in operation we have paid out $400,000,000 in gold above former disbursements, for the cheap foreign goods we have purchased. The above may not be the exact figures but they give the proportions of change on our financial balance sheet."

"The great mistake of the Wilson bill was in making so many of the duties advalorem instead of specific. Many of the importers in our principal Atlantic seaboard cities are nothing else than agents for foreign manufacturers. It is understood, of course, that an advalorem duty is a certain per cent. on a given price and quantity while a specific duty is a fixed amount upon a certain article. These foreigners ship a certain quantity of goods, say a million dollars' worth to the importers and upon a private understanding have the goods invoiced at $400,000 or $500,000, and thus the government is defrauded out of the duty on half a million or more, probably, or upwards of 50 per cent. on a large portion of the goods imported. While advalorem duties sound nice in theory they do not work in practice especially among sharp dealers. Nearly every secretary of the treasury since the organization of the government has noted the same result with regard to the two duties, the single exception is Secretary Walker.

As to pensions, Mr. Mahon expects to have his bill passed, which makes a pension a vested right of which the soldier cannot be deprived except by fraud, accident or mistake. There is little doubt that this will become a law and then pensioners will not be harrassed and driven from post to pillar as they have been by the changes in rulings, spiteful espionage and other unmanly means.

A Wedding in Amberson's Valley.

Wednesday evening, December 18th at 6.30 o'clock, the marriage of Mr. David A. Coleman of Newburg, Cumberland county, and Miss Annie M. Craig, oldest daughter of James S. Craig, was solemnized at the home of the bride in Amberson's Valley. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Thomas Dobbin of Dry Run. The wedding march was rendered by Prof. D. H. Shoemaker at the organ. About 70 persons witnessed the marriage. The friends and acquaintances from a distance were, Rev. Dobbin and wife of Dry Run; William Coleman and wife, parents of the groom, of Newburg; William L. Craig and wife of Scotland; Elisha Deihl and wife, Shippensburg; A. W. Burkholder and wife, McKinney, and Mr. Emerson Mowery and lady, Miss Coleman of Newburg. The presents to the bride were numerous and useful. On Thursday morning the happy young couple, accompanied by friends, took their departure for Mr. Coleman's home near Newburg, where they will take up their residence in the spring.

GENERAL NEWS NOTES

Clipped and Condensed From Our Exchanges.

Bishop Daniel Brundage, of the Mennonite church, died Thursday, at his home in Wakarusa, Indiana, aged 84 years.

A memorial service in honor of the late Allen G. Thurman was held in the auditorium of the Columbus (Ohio) Board of Trade on Friday evening. Governor McKinley was one of the speakers.

The Navy Department received information Friday from Nagasaki, Japan, that the intermediate piston of the cruiser Charleston had become disabled through cracking. A new cylinder has been ordered from the Union Iron Works, San Francisco.

The President, on Saturday, rejected the coast defence ram Katahdin, built by the Bath Iron Works, the vessel having failed to attain the speed required in the contract. A bill for the purchase of the ram was subsequently introduced in the Senate by Senator Hale.

The Constitution of the state of Utah, which was submitted to the Attorney General by the President, has been examined and approved by that officer. The President will on January 4, 1896, issue his proclamation admitting the territory of Utah as a state of the Union.

The practice of clipping horses is being opposed by farmers and others, and resolutions to this effect are approved heartily when offered in agricultural societies of the eastern counties of the state.

An explosion of gas occurred in the Bumnock bituminous coal mine in Chatham county, N. C., on Thursday morning. There were 63 men in the mine, 25 of whom escaped, and the remaining 38 were imprisoned in the shaft which is over 500 feet deep.

The bankers of Pennsylvania met at the Continental hotel in Philadelphia last week and formed an organization. The state is divided into eight groups, each group containing from one to ten counties and arranged so that their business interests should be as nearly identical as possible.

Quarry Foreman, Elias Snyder and neighbors of Lancaster, spent yesterday and Tuesday dragging the Conestoga creek for a distance of four miles for the body of Mrs. Snyder, a supposed suicide. On Saturday she disappeared after a quarrel with her husband and threatened to drown herself.

A despatch from Newfoundland, received in Halifax yesterday, says it has now been learned there were in all 22 persons on the ill-fated schooner Victoria, believed to have foundered with all on board off Cabot Island, on the Newfoundland coast. Among them were a family named Noseworthy, husband and wife and five children. The stem of the Victoria has been picked up at Horse Island.

Two tramps entered a Youngstown saloon the other day with a gallon jug, ordered it filled with whisky and tendered a dollar in payment, which the saloonist refused, saying it was $4 whisky. They refused to pay and he poured it into the barrel. The tramps left with the jug and stopping a short distance away broke it. It contained two sponges well soaked with whiskey which furnished them several drinks.

A despatch from Muncie, Indiana, says that on Thursday night six men with pistols drawn boarded the southbound passenger train on the Cincinnati and Louisville road, between Montpelier and Keystone, and ordered the passengers to stand and deliver. A general fight ensued, in which the passengers and trainmen helped. Not a shot was fired. The robbers fled to the woods, taking with them some overcoats and satchels.

Two young men, Thomas Mayberry, of Sunbury, and John Ford, of Northumberland, met a horrible death Tuesday. They were killed at the Georgetown water tank by the Northern Central express. The young men were riding between the engine tender and the first car, and they fell while the train was running full speed. Their mangled remains were scattered along the tracks for two miles. Tattooing on their arms led to the identification.

A family of eight persons who were encamped on Spring River, west of Joplin, Missouri, were swept away by a flood Saturday. Great damage has been done by the overflowing of the bottom lands in various parts of the state.—During a flood in the Cuivre river, at Old Monroe, Missouri, on Saturday, John Heitman, August and Henry Longnecker, W. Meadows and wife and a boy named Martin were drowned by the overturning of a skiff in which they were trying to reach a place of safety.—A despatch from Wagoner, Indian Territory, says that the rain of two days' duration and a heavy snowfall Thursday night which melted has caused an overflow in the Grand, Verdigris and Arkansas rivers, which has flooded hundreds of farms and forced the inhabitants to take refuge in the hills.

Thomas Martindale and wife, an aged couple, residing near Uniontown, were bound, gagged and robbed of all their possessions by a band of masked burglars on Saturday night. The victims of the outrage were quietly sitting by their fire when five men forced open the door and sprang upon them. Mr. Martindale was listening to his wife, who was reading from the Bible. The thieves threatened to burn the old lady's feet if she refused to reveal where they kept their money. This she refused to do, but her husband told where their money was secreted. The robbers secured $95 and left the house. It was evident that the intruders were familiar with the family's affairs as they demanded $600 which had been paid to the old gentleman on Thursday, but which he fortunately had deposited in bank.

An Important Will Contested.

Several of the children of Charles S. Shields, by his first wife, were in town Thursday to object to the execution of the provisions of their father's will. Our readers will remember that Mr. Shields died suddenly a few weeks ago while on a visit with his wife to Juniata county. When just beyond Waterloo Mr. Shields was taken ill. His wife drove back with him to Waterloo where he was taken to G. W. Campbell's residence. Justice Crouse was sent for and wrote Mr. Shields' will, and in a few hours after, Mr. Shields died. The will gives to his second wife—now his widow—$2000 and all his personal property, to use during her lifetime, and at her death what remains of this is to go to her three children. Funeral expenses and other debts are to be paid first, of course.

The children of the first wife claim that their father was not in fit mental condition to make a will at the time the will was made. They also feel that the provisions of the will are not equitable. The real estate which consists of a good farm is estimated to be worth about $3000, though Mr. Shields paid nearly twice that amount for it. The personal property is estimated to be worth not less than $500.

The hearing before Register and Recorder Ledy will be concluded to-day (Thursday.)

LEGAL NOTICES.

ADMINITRATOR'S NOTICE.—Notice is hereby given that letters of administration upon the estate of Daniel Painter, late of the Borough of Chambersburg, Franklin county, Pa., have been granted to the undersigned. All persons indebted to said estate will please make payment, and all having claims will present them properly authenticated for settlement.

WILLIAM BERGER,
Administrator.

MASTER'S NOTICE:—

Court of Common Pleas of Franklin County, Penn'a.

Libel in Divorce { LIZZIE PATTERSON vs. THOMAS H. PATTERSON.

To Thomas H. Patterson, Respondent, now living in Dayton, Ohio.

Having been appointed Master by the above named Court to take testimony, find facts and report the same with an opinion, I will sit for the purpose of my appointment at my office in Chambersburg, Pa., on Monday, January 6th, 1896, at 10 o'clock, A. M., to here all persons interested, when and where you may appear if you see proper. The cause for which said divorce is asked is wilful and malicious desertion,

WALTER F. HOLLER,
Master.

WM. M. BERGER,
Admr. of Daniel Painter.

MONEY SAVERS

It's all nonsense paying two or three prices for Christmas goods or anything else for that matter just because it is Christmas.

The fact that you are generous is no reason why we should be less so.

We sell Christmas goods at the same profits you pay for any other kind any other time.

You will find our prices are money savers these days and our store a money saving institution when everybody is on the make.

We don't work for your confidence eleven months in the year and trick you now. We don't do business that way.

This winter's Heating Stoves are especially good. The Art Perpect, Brilliant Sunshine and Perfect Gem Heaters heat the bedrooms above equally as well as the lower rooms.

The new Gold Coin Stoves have had a wonderful sale. Beautiful stoves and excellent workers—no wonder people are delighted.

A Wood Stove named the "Wonder" is a surprise. Not a door on the stove. Fire built from the top and yet no smoke. A chunk lasts all day and heats a room. It is certainly a marvel. Price $8.50.

Many other Wood Stoves that are made to heat. Dozens of Coal Stoves—handsome and plain. Large lot of second-hand stoves of all kinds, cheap.

Lard Cans—plenty of cheap ones—and our make, the very best. They will neither leak nor melt off the bottoms. We will pay for any loss. Come, try them. Prices are right.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1895.

A WORD IN PASSING.

Town and County Briefs With a Bit of Comment—Happenings of the Week and a Forecast of Coming Events.

The school children of Chambersburg are having a two weeks' vacation. The schools will re-open January 6.

There will be Watch Night services in the M. E. church from 9.30 p. m. to midnight of the last night in the year.

Sheriff Jones on Friday took the prisoners who were sentenced at the late term of court, to the Eastern Penitentiary.

The commission of S. G. Greenawalt as sheriff and that of Dr. L. F. Suesserott as coroner have been received by Register Ledy.

S. J. George, Five Forks, has been appointed ticket and freight agent of the W. M. R. R. Co., in place of S. S. Wingert, resigned.

R. B. Ritchie, the railroad agent at Mercersburg, will put up another oil tank which is much needed for his increasing trade in coal oil.

H. S. Gillespie was re-elected Second Lieutenant of Company C. 8th Regt. N. G., on Friday evening. The election was unanimous.

The holiday vacation of the C. V. Normal school, Shippensburg, began Wednesday of last week and will continue till Monday next.

T. Z. Minehart has been appointed by the court to audit the accounts of the Prothonotary, Register and Recorder, and Clerk of the Courts.

It is said a new roller mill to be run by steam is to be erected at New Franklin by John W. Rhine. The timber is already being placed on the ground.

Walter Fitz, the three-years-old child of Elzie Fitz, Waynesboro, ignited a box of matches Tuesday of last week and was very badly burned from his feet to his head.

Hance A. Campbell, of Doylesburg, last week purchased on private terms the Ryder farm in Upper Path Valley on private terms. The farm contains about 300 acres.

J. Rush Gillan, the dealer in implements and machinery, is making a specially favorable rate on the Aermotor for pumping or grinding. Give him a call before the first of January.

William Miller, of near Fayetteville, had three fingers torn off and the remainder of his hand badly lacerated by an explosion of dynamite on Wednesday of last week, while blasting rocks.

Mrs. Geo. B. Yeager on Saturday received a draft for $1000, Widows' and Orphans' Benefit fund of Franklin Conclave Improved Order Heptasophs, of which her late husband was a member.

The general store of 'Squire Peter Kirk at Big Cove Tannery, Fulton county, was entered by burglars Wednesday night of last week and a quantity of goods, some money and postage stamps were taken.

The new depot building at Mercersburg will soon be completed and ready for occupancy. It is comfortable and attractive and will add greatly to the comfort of waiting passengers and the agent.

Major Bell of Gettysburg is expected to be present at the installation of McCullough Post, G. A. R., Mercersburg, on riday evening, January 3, 1896. He was major of the 21st Penna. cavalry.

Norman H. Funk, of Zullinger, has a pocket comb which he claims was given to him by Gen. Robt. E. Lee. Gen. Lee, while on his way to Gettysburg, took dinner at the home of Mr. Funk and presented him with the comb.

The W. M. R. R. company has purchased two additional steam plows, of the Russell make. The road has now three of these plows. One will be stationed at Hagerstown, one on the Highfield and Gettysburg division and one in Baltimore.

Van T. Graham, one of the merchants of St. Thomas, has been appointed mercantile appraiser. There were quite a number of applicants before the commissioners for the position. There is no question that Mr. Graham will perform the duties of the position faithfully.

The teachers of Guilford district will hold a local institute at New Franklin on Friday and Saturday, January 3 and 4. The program is quite elaborate and indicates enough work to make all the sessions busy ones. The topics are all important and their discussion should be profitable to all the teachers and through them, to their schools.

Corporal Rihl Post G. A. R., of Greencastle, will hold a fair and festival during Holiday week and will close with Capt. Long's Panorama of the battle of Gettysburg on New Year's night. The purpose is to replenish the fund for relief purposes as this fund is running low. The purpose is a worthy one and the fair should be well patronized.

The entertainment in Rosedale Christmas evening by the Royal Hand Bell Ringers was one of the most delightful that our people have listened to for a long time, and was greatly enjoyed by a large audience who manifested their pleasure in repeated demonstrations of applause. Mr. Eyster is to be congratulated on furnishing so excellent a musical treat.

Miss Annie Kissell, the young girl charged with attempting to poison the family of David H. Martin, near Middleburg, was given a trial before Justice Bitner Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. After hearing considerable testimony the case was dismissed and the young lady fully vindicated. She was congratulated after the trial, by many friends, upon the happy termination of the suit.

Peter Cummings has received upwards of $300 back pay on account of his service as lieutenant in Captain Easton's famous battery. Mr. Cumings' service began in the spring of '61 and continued till August '65, first as lieutenant in the battery and afterwards in the 11th Penna. Cavalry. His applications for a pension have been uniformly turned down, though he was one of the bravest soldiers in the late war.

A persimmon seed in its windpipe caused the death of the six-years-old son of Tilghman and Martha Houser, of Staples Manor, Md., Thursday morning. The seed got into its lung Wednesday afternoon and could not be removed. The child suffered greatly until death released it. Since the death of the child Mr. Houser has become insane from grief over the manner of the child's death. He tried to drown himself but was prevented. It was found necessary to commit him to jail to prevent him from taking his own life. His mind has been impaired for some time, but the accident to his child made him much worse.

The M. E. Sunday school at Metal held a very pleasant and profitable festival yesterday. The U. B. and Presbyterian schools of the same place are holding one conjointly this afternoon and evening.

A large rock fell from an embankment to the W. M. R. R. track, near Williamsport, Md., Sunday night. Monday morning a freight engine ran into the rock and broke the pilot of the engine. The morning passenger train north, was delayed over an hour because of the obstruction on the track.

The Justices of the Peace in Chambersburg had considerable business this morning, the results of last night's troubles arising from a too free indulgence on the part of the bibulous. A colored man was arrested by the police at the W. M. R. R. station at noon today; he was in condition to settle the Venezuela boundary question after a hostile fashion.

The Shippensburg Chronicle says the Big Pond still continues low and partly dry. It is now frozen over and a few days ago Jacob C. Russell and his brother cut holes in the ice and measured the depth of the water, finding it to be but twenty-one and a-half feet. This is about twenty feet less than the normal depth of the pond.

On the State College agricultural farm this fall there was gathered the largest yield of corn ever heard of in Pennsylvania or the east. From six acres were husked a little over 1000 bushels of corn or a little over an average of 175 bushels to the acre. The crop was sown in the spring for ensilage, but it was allowed to mature as an experiment. The ears measured from twelve to sixteen inches in length and were well filled out.

Baker Beaver, while walking across the farm of James Van Meter at Martinsburg, West Va., was shot by Samuel May, a tenant. May was directed by Van Meter to keep off trespassers, and when Beaver started across May requested him to get off. Beaver retraced his steps, remarking that he would go as fast as he could, but had gone but a short distance when May fired at him with a shot-gun. The charge took effect in the head and shoulders, making a very serious wound.

There will be no days of grace upon bankable paper after January 1, 1896. All notes given upon or after that date will be payable upon the expiration of the number of days designated in the note, and not on the third day thereafter. As this provision of the new law passed at the last session of the legislature has gone the rounds of the papers, everybody should be posted. If borrowers forget or fail to make themselves acquainted with the law they will be reminded of it by the notaries.

The baby of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Kling, of the mill at The Knob near Spring Run, some days ago got a grain of corn in its windpipe. On Wednesday of last week the parents brought the child to town for treatment but as the corn had got down into one of the tubes of the lung nothing could be done for it. There appears to be no hope of saving the child's life. The entire community sympathizes with the little one in its sufferings and with the parents in their anxiety. The child is about a year old.

The C. V. R. R. company has awarded prizes, following the recent inspection of the road, to the section foremen on the main line and branches as follows: Main line, first prize, Section Foreman G. W. Snyder, section eight, Oakville; second prize, Section Foreman Miles Jacobs, section twelve, South Penn Junction; third prize, Section Foreman W. O. Hollar, section twenty-one, Winchester. Branch lines, Frederick Smith, section D 2, Dillsburg; second prize, J. C. Smith, section South Penn 4, Fort Loudon.

Over forty years ago Barney Martin started from his home, near Piney Grove, Alleghany county, Md., twelve miles west of Hancock, on a rabbit hunt, and was never heard of until a few days ago when he walked into the home of his niece, Mrs. Mitchell, who resides in that neighborhood. Mr. Martin is now a vigorous man of 65 years and the owner of two large ranches in Washington and Oregon. He was supposed to be dead these many years, and an estate belonging to him and his brothers and sisters was settled, his share being divided among the others. Mr. Martin is a pensioner.

On Monday afternoon, says the Mercersburg Journal, William Amsley, who was engaged in off-bearing at the saw mill, connected with the planing mill of D. W. Faust, slipped and was caught by the saw which cut the fleshy part of the right leg away below the knee joint. Had it not been for Mr. Faust who had charge of the saw and noticed the accident, and had the presence of mind to reverse the saw, he would in all probability been sawed in two. Dr. Blair was called and the man was taken to his home where the wound was dressed, and at this writing, Tuesday morning, the patient is resting very comfortably.

A Clearfield county farmer had a cow that was afflicted with cancer of the jaw, quite a lump being noticed, and the cow was regularly milked but the cow having a cancer the milk was thrown away. The farmer concluded to send for a bovine physician and relieve the cow. The surgeon arrived on the ground and after lassoing and binding the critter the cancer was removed which was nothing more nor less than a china nest egg that had lodged between the jaw bone and skin and the cow was unable to move it. The cow is still living and the farmer now uses the milk but he does not like to have any one refer to cancer in cows.

The Governor Addresses Veterans.

Governor Hastings on Sunday addressed Lysle Post, Grand Army of the Republic, in Pittsburg, at a memorial meeting to the members who died this year. He said at the conclusion of his speech:

"Lately we have been having growls from the British lion, but the stars and stripes are in no more danger than when Lee handed his sword to Grant. Two great people speaking the same language, engaged in the same pursuits, having the same Bible, and believing in the same God will not go to war. Let us hope so, anyway. Let us hope that wisdom will prevail and that the resorts will be those of peace. But let there be no peace that will put a stain upon our flag. Let us stand for our rights, Let us insist upon the principles of the Constitution and those great principles of security and self-preservation enunciated by that great President, James Monroe. Those principles must stand, and in the future, as in the past, our people will prosper and our country blossom as the rose." The Governor was the guest of Lieutenant Governor Lyon while in the city.

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS.

Items of Interest About Your and Our Friends and Those Whom We All Know.

Misses Nell and Jessie Nace are visiting relatives and friends in McConnellsburg.

Mrs. Jas. Williams, of Letterkenny, is lying very ill with heart trouble at her home. She is about 73 years of age.

David Grove and wife, Virginia, are visiting Mr. Grove's uncle, Lemuel Karper, and other friends in Letterkenny.

Chas. D. Foust, Upper Strasburg, and Elijah Bender, Pleasant Hall, were business visitors at the REVIEW office Friday.

John Yeager, of Edenville, called in on Saturday. He likes the REVIEW and to prove his liking he advanced his subscription.

Mrs. A. S. Baker, Scranton, is spending the holiday season with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Van T. Haulman, East Queen street.

District Attorney F. McN. Johnston of McConnellsburg, was a Christmas visitor to Chambersburg and a pleasant caller at the REVIEW office.

James W. Carson, of Mercersburg, returned from Philadelphia on Friday, where he had been for several weeks a juror in the United States court.

John Stoey, son of Dr. Stoey, Roxbury, is home for the holidays. He is a medical student in Philadelphia and comes via Alliance, Virginia, where he has been to see friends.

A. J. Fore, Jr., of Burnt Cabins, was a business visitor to Chambersburg over Monday night. Tuesday morning he called to pay his respects to the REVIEW, said kindly things about it and paid a year's subscription.

Col. Joe Miller, who has been making his home at Black's Gap and furnishing items for the REVIEW from that section, left Monday for Washington where he has business; he will probably remain in the Capitol city for the remainder of the winter.

L. H. Wible, Esq., McConnellsburg, was a business visitor to Chambersburg Saturday. While here he showed his appreciation of the REVIEW by advancing his subscription to January 1897. 'Squire Wible has purchased of D. B. Nace a handsome property in McConnellsburg.

Edwin D. Bricker, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bricker, arrived home Monday morning from West Point where he is a cadet. This was his first visit home since he entered West Point. His furlough expired Christmas evening. Mr. Bricker is one of five in his class who by meritorious conduct received a furlough.

Philip Steck and J. A. Burke, of Willow Hill, were pleasant callers at the REVIEW office Saturday and paid their own subscriptions and that of Michael Shearer of the same place. The REVIEW's list at Willow Hill is quite large and still keeps growing. The publisher is grateful indeed, for the substantial friendship and support of his many friends in that section as well as in many other sections of Path Valley.

Valentine Steck, of Keystone Mills, near Willow Hill, who was in to advance his subscription Saturday, says the waters are very low. He is unable to run the rolls in his mill continuously. He is one of those uncomplaining people, however, who accept situations philosophically; he says there is no use in worrying—that rain will come by and by. Mr. Steck has Piper and Shearer with their steam saw mill cutting walnut and poplar timber of which he has a quantity and most of it is quite fine and valuable.

Christmas and New Year Holiday Rates Via Cumberland Valley and Pennsylvania Railroads.

For the Christmas and New Year Holidays the Cumberland Valley Railroad Company will sell excursion tickets between stations on its own line and to points on the Pennsylvania System East of and including Pittsburg and Erie and West of Elizabeth and Sea Girt, N. J., at reduced rates. Tickets to be sold and good going December 21, 22, 23, 24, 25 and 31, 1895, and January 1, 1896, and will be good for return passage until January 7, 1896, inclusive.

They Raised the Money But They Were Weak In Spelling.

At the Center County Teachers' Institute, at Bellefonte on Friday, it was announced that $41 had been raised for the Dr. Burrowes Memorial fund. The reports on the spelling test submitted on Wednesday showed that only three teachers had spelled every word correctly in the following list:

Alacrity, accommodate, alphabetical, collegiate, censurable, coalesce, christening, debility, extolled, elementary, emissary, favorites, February, grammatical, homily, incomparable, Ithaca, limiting, liberal, legality, marriageable, mercantile, nullify, obsequies, prejudice, permissible, quarantine, paroled, possessed, rheumatic, resistance, sensible, sustenance, sewerage, subordinate, susceptible, Tammany, apothecaries, avaricious, affirmative, committees, consoled, ceremonial, consensus, differentiate, economic, effervescent, embarrass, feminine, financial, guaranteed, inseparable, intelligent, inflammatory, legislature, laths, mirrors, matinee, medicinal, nutritious, omitted, pluralities, parliamentary, professor, pitiless, regretting, Poughkeepsie, partisan, requirement, suffrage, soliloquy, Susquehanna, suburbs, sinecure, Tennessee.

A Rich Musical Treat.

The De Moss family of bell ringers will appear in Housum Post Hall Thursday evening, January 9, and will give one of their famous and inimitable musical entertainments. The family consists of four persons. Besides the bell ringing they play upon forty-two musical instruments. One of their number plays two tunes at once on two cornets. This company has a reputation which is not excelled by any other company of musicians of the kind in the country. They have rendered their music in all the principal cities of Europe and America. The entertainment will be given in behalf of the Post fund and will no doubt be liberally patronized, as it should be.

Western Maryland Railroad Atlanta Exposition Excursion Rates.

From Chambersburg the Western Maryland Railroad offers these routes to the Great Cotton States Exposition at Atlanta, as follows:

DEATH'S DOINGS.

Those Who Have Passed to the Great Beyond—The Death Record In Franklin County and Elsewhere.

Mrs. Ephraim Minnich died at her home in Fayetteville Saturday, in the 60th year of her age, after a short illness. For more than thirty-five years she was a member of the M. E. church, and her life was in entire accord with her religious profession. The funeral took place Tuesday. Interment in Mount Pleasant graveyard.

***

Jacob M. Claudy, a former resident of Newville, died suddenly of paralysis of the heart in Belair, Ohio, Wednesday. His remains were brought to Chambersburg Friday morning to the residence of his brother-in-law, David Yost. The funeral took place Saturday. Interment in Cedar Grove cemetery. Mr. Claudy was a brother-in-law of John G. Yost, Scotland.

***

Mrs. Salome Householder died Tuesday night at 11 o'clock at the home of her son-in-law, Christian Elser, on West King street, aged 78 years and 6 months. The funeral will take place Friday at 3 p. m. Interment in Cedar Grove cemetery. Mrs. Householder had been in declining health for some time and her death was not unexpected. She was born in Germany.

***

Mrs. Ann Campbell, widow of the late Charles Campbell, of Path Valley, died at the home of her son-in-law, Amos M. Miller, at Mount Parnell, Friday, December 20, aged about 80 years. She is survived by a number of children: Mrs. Amos M. Miller, at whose home she died; Mrs. Robt. Noonan, Metal; Mrs. Isaac Kane, Chambersburg; Mrs. Robt. Rouse, Iowa; Thomas, Newville; Samuel, Fort Loudon; William S. and John C., Chambersburg. She is survived also by a sister, Mrs. Jane Miller, and three brothers: John T., S. Doyle and C. Brooks Jones. Mrs. Campbell was the daughter of the late Samuel Jones, Sen., of Metal, and was the oldest member of the family.

The funeral took place Monday. Interment in the old Presbyterian graveyard near Fannettsburg.

Christmas in Trinity Reformed Sunday School at St. Thomas.

Trinity Reformed Sunday school of St. Thomas celebrated its annual Christmas festival on Tuesday evening (Christmas eve) in a very appropriate way. The front of the room was very tastefully decorated with evergreens. The program, entitled "Good Tidings," was very successfully rendered and consisted of appropriate songs, recitations, responsive reading, Apostle's Creed, Lord's prayer and scripture reading. Supt. J. C. Deatrich delivered the address of greeting. A very appropriate Christmas address was made by the efficient pastor, Rev. H. N. Bassler, presenting many valuable thoughts for consideration. The musical department was under charge of Prof. J. H. Palsgrove and Miss Carrie Brandt, organist, who deserve great credit for their unwearied efforts in making this department such a grand success. The treat consisted of candy and oranges. The candy was arranged in nicely tinted boxes of various shades. A very pleasing feature of this very interesting and happy occasion was the presentation of a beautiful cutter to the highly esteemed pastor, Rev. H. N. Bassler, by the members of the congregation. The presentation speech was made by C. M. Deatrich, whose very appropriate and facetious remarks were highly appreciated by the audience. Special presents for services rendered were also given Supt. J. C Deatrich, Prof. J. H. Polsgrove and wife, Miss Carrie Brandt, Sexton Jere Brindle and wife. These were presented in fitting and very well chosen words by Prof. J. L. Finefrock the able secretary and treasurer of the Sunday school. The exercises throughout were a grand success in every respect and elicited the closest attention of a large and appreciative audience. The contribution was devoted to beneficiary education. Thus passed into history the Christmas festival of 1895. D.

To The Penitentiary.

In the U. S. District Court in Philadelphia on Monday, Judge Butler sentenced Charles W. Raymond, President, and Edward M. Raymond, Cashier, of the Middletown National Bank, who were convicted on the charge of misappropriating the funds of the defunct bank, to seven years and five months imprisonment each in the Eastern Penitentiary.

Edward M. Raymond had also been found guilty of making false reports to the Comptroller of the Currency, but he was not sentenced for this, it being considered by the Judge that the offense was in connection with the misappropriation and that the punishment inflicted was sufficient. Chas. W. Raymond, who appeared to be in bad health, was considerably crest-fallen, but the ex-cashier was apparently unmoved by the sentence.

Notice.

Those persons who are willing to accommodate delegates to the G. A. R. encampment in June next are requested to make known to any of the following named persons how many they will entertain, whether by boarding or lodging or both and whether they prefer men or women or whether they can accommodate both. They should also state their charges:

E. L. Wesley, Montgomdry House; J. F. Vanderau, Union House; Chas. Levan, F. W. Day, John Eckels, South Main; B. F. Johns, South Second; Geo. A. Minnich, King; H. H. Woodal, West Market.

He Was Kindly Remembered.

The friends of Clerk Raff of the commissioners' office, remembered him kindly yesterday while he was home at Foltz with his family, by erecting a handsome Christmas tree for him in the commissioners' vault. A card appended to the tree stated that it came from a grateful constituency. Upon its branches were hung dolls, whistles and everything that will please Mr. Raff's little folks, including articles of baby attire. It is needless to say that Mr. Raff appreciates the gift and will appropriate the belongings upon the tree to their proper uses.

G. A. R. Officers Elected.

The officers of Capt. J. P. McCullough Post, G. A. R., of Mercersburg, which were recently elected, are as follows: Command, N. W. Kuhn; Sen. Vice, Levi Sleighter; Jun. Vice, D. B. Grosh; Officer of the Day, D. F. McDonald; Chaplain, D. S. Stouffer; Quartermaster, Milton Hause; Surgeon, D. F. Unger; Officer of the Guard, William Selsor; Representative to the State Encampment, A. A. Myers; Alternate, L. H. Henkell. The officers will be publicly installed in Brubaker's Hall, Friday evening, January 3.

A DEAD SOLDIER'S DISCHARGE.

Recovered On a Battlefield in The Wilderness.

Philip J. McElhenny of Concord, accompanied by his daughter, was in town Thursday on business. Mr. McElhenny brought with him a soldier's discharge which was recovered from the body of a dead man (presumably the man named in the discharge) by Adam Fogal of near Doylesburg, in one of the battles of the wilderness. Mr. Fogal has had the discharge ever since and has made efforts to find friends or relatives of the dead soldier but without avail. The discharge is made out to Charles H. Lovejoy, sergeant in Captain Ambrose F. Cole's Company C, 59th New York volunteers. It is dated December 21, 1863, and was given by reason of re-enlistment at "Camp near Levensburg." The soldier was 23 years of age, 5 feet 9 inches high and when first enlisted was a harness maker. He was born at "Constableville in the state of New York." The regiment was commanded at the time by Lieutenant Colonel Horace P. Rugg.

Mr. Fogal would be glad to turn the discharge over to any one who as a relative might be entitled to it or in any way benefited by it.

A Quiet Christmas.

Christmas day passed off quietly but pleasantly in Chambersburg. There were services in a number of the churches, beginning with Zion's Reformed at 6 o'clock in the morning. It consisted mostly of very excellent music by the choir under the direction of C. W. Cremer. There were also devotional exercises and responsive readings. The congregation filled the church. A number of the churches and Sunday schools held their Christmas exercises Tuesday evening and had no services yesterday.

In Trinity Episcopal and Corpus Christi Catholic, there were morning services. In the evening there were Sunday school exercises in the First U. B. church, in Trinity Lutheran and in the Methodist Episcopal. There were handsome decorations, special music and many other features. In the last named church there were contributions for the poor, consisting of clothing, edibles, money, etc., to an amount that would give relief and gladness to many families. The pastor, Rev. B. H. Mosser, received a handsome silver communion service to be used in administering the communion to the sick and others who are unable to leave their homes. Superintendent David Speer received a handsomely bound volume of Bishop Taylor's "Story of My Life." Janitor and sexton Henneberger received a pair of gum boots, the leg of each of which was filled with good things.

There were many reunions at Christmas dinners. Many of the younger people enjoyed themselves in buggy rides about the town or out in the country.

There was unusually good order throughout the day; only a few instances occurred in which Captain Parker vanquished his victims until in the evening when it was noticeable that a number of young men or boys were rather too jubilant.

Not for many years have we had so warm a Christmas day in this latitude. The jingle of sleighbells would have been more in consonance with the desires of the people, but the absence of these was more acceptable to those with whom fuel, food and clothing were scarce. All in all, it was a "Merry Christmas," the day being enjoyed by as many of our people as usually welcome this joyous anniversary.

Cigarettes Are Physically, Mentally and Morally Destructive.

Dr. Benjamin Blackford, the able superintendent of the western State hospital at Staunton, Va., in his annual report to the board of directors of that institution, made last week, says:

"To a great extent the increase of insanity may be attributed to the pernicious 'cigarette-smoking habit,' now so long prevalent among and undermining the moral, physical and mental health of the youth of our country during the period of youth and development, when the brain is tender and plastic and easily affected by the noxious inhalations issuing through and around the nervous centres. His nervous organization is apt to become more shattered by the 'cigarette habit' than if he were addicted to alcoholic stimulants during that period, and will surely be the first to give way, and of course the first to suffer, especially during the period of puberty, with its strain on the nervous system. The youth at college who burns the midnight oil is to be commended for his industry, but too often he burns out his brain at the same time with the accompanying cigarette. The process of waste and injury to the nervous system may be greater than the repair, and mental bankruptcy is the result."

He Has Made Farming Pay.

W. A. Trogler of near Mercersburg, was a business visitor to Chambersburg Friday and called to advance his subscription to the REVIEW which he thinks is a good paper. Mr. Trogler is one of the successful farmers in his section. He moved upon a farm which he went in debt for in 1870, in the Corner southwest of Mercersburg. Now he owns four farms, two in Peters and two in Montgomery townships, comprising in all 900 acres, besides 300 acres of timber land in Warren township. He has made each farm that he bought pay for itself. Mr. Trogler finds his principal profit in growing and selling hay. His sales of the past season's crop yielded him $1,300. He also has some grain to sell every year and some live stock, but not much of the last. One of the horses with which he began farming in 1870, died only a short time ago at the age of 29 years. It was to him a valuable animal.

Some Hogs.

MR. EDITOR:—I see in many of our county papers reports of the large porkers they feel proud to let the people know of, therefore, we deem it an injustice to let old Letterkenny out of the list. Our genial young merchant of Keefers, found it necessary to call his champion butcher, George Pugh, Sr., to his place on Wednesday of last week to slaughter five of his corn exterminators. Many of his friends were present to note the weights. The first tipped the scales at 18 pounds, the second 22½, the third 23, fourth and fifth forgotten. Mr. Myers says he don't like to lift so heavily is the reason for the light weights. We would say that Mr. M. will not get the dyspepsia eating fat.

SOME WAR AND NAVAL RECOLLECTIONS

Some Historical Dates of Present Interest to Patriotic Americans.

On Jan. 14, 1812, an increase of the United States army was authorized by the Congress. On April 10, 1812, the President was authorized by the Congress to call for 100,000 American volunteers. On June 1, 1812, the President, James Madison, sent to the Congress his war message, and on June 19 war was declared by the United States against Great Britain.

On July 12, 1812, Canada was invaded by an American army, and Aug. 14 the United States frigate Essex captured the Alert near Newfoundland. Six days later the American frigate Constitution captured the British frigate Guerriere, and on Oct. 4, 1812, there was a land battle at Ogdensburg, where the Americans, under Gen. Brown, repulsed the British.

On June 13, 1813, the British invaders of American territory were repulsed at Hampton, Va., and on July 11, on the north border, the British were repulsed in the battle of Black Rock, N. Y. On Sept. 10, 1813, the notable battle of Lake Erie between the naval forces of Great Britain and the United States took place, the American squadron consisting of nine vessels with fifty-four guns and the British squadron of six vessels with sixty-three guns. Commodore Perry commanded the American naval forces and they won a substantial victory, the entire British fleet being captured.

On Sept. 11, 1814, there was another important and decisive naval battle on Lake Champlain. Capt. Macdonough, with fourteen American vessels, having eighty-six guns, engaged with ninety-five guns, in a battle of nearly three hours duration, during which all the British ships were either sunk or captured, and 900 English prisoners were taken by the Americans.

On the 8th of January, 1815, the desultory fighting which had been going on in the Southwest between the American and the British forces, culminated in the memorable battle of New Orleans, a triumph so decisive for American arms that the anniversary, Jan. 8, has been perpetuated by patriotic Americans in celebration ever since. The English army, commanded by Gen. Packenham, consisted of 12,000 soldiers, and the American army, under command of Gen. Andrew Jackson, amounted to 6,000. In the month of November preceding, the British force had landed below New Orleans for the purpose of attacking that city, and a battle on New Year's day, 1815, having been indecisive, one week later Gen. Packenham's army renewed the attack and the British were routed, losing 2,000 men in killed and wounded, and prisoners taken. On Jan. 27, the defeated British troops reembarked for home at the mouth of the Mississippi, and on the same day the Treaty of Ghent between the United States and Great Britain was ratified by the latter. On Feb. 17 it was ratified by the United States, and that was the formal close of hostility between the two countries.

By the official census of 1811, taken in the year preceding the beginning of hostilities with the United States, the population of England was 10,200,000, of Scotland 1,800,000, and or Ireland 6,000,000, a total of 18,000,000. The census of the United States taken in 1810 showed the total population of this country to be, States and Territories, 7,238,000.

The last official census of Great Britain, taken in 1891, showed the population to have been 37,888,006, and the census of the United States, taken the year previous, showed the population of this country to be 62,622,000; and all the Americans weren't counted, either.—N. Y. Sun.

Happily Married.

At the home of Elisha H. Miller near New Franklin, on Wednesday evening the 18th inst., at 5 o'clock, Mr. Miller's daughter, Miss Lillie A., was married to Bruce M. Wingert, son of David G. Wingert of the same vicinity. The ceremony was performed by the bride's pastor, Rev. M. S. Romig of the Lutheran church at Grindstone Hill. The wedding march was played by Miss Sallie Teeter of Lemaster. Miss Clara Strine and Miss Bessie Wingert, sister of the groom, were the bridesmaids. Claude Wingert, brother of the groom, and Albert Miller, brother of the bride, were groomsmen. The bride and her maids were all becomingly attired and very handsome, as were the groom and his attendants. The parlor in which the ceremony was performed was appropriately decorated with evergreens.

After the ceremony a bountiful supper was served to the guests who numbered about fifty friends and relatives of the happy couple. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Snavely of near Haerstown; Mrs. Myers and Mrs. Snavely of Hagerstown; D. A. A. Miller and wife of Altoona; Mr. and Mrs. Stuff of near Upton; Bruce Gordon and Miss Gordon of near Greencastle, and Benjamin Bowman and wife of Jackson Hall. Many valuable and useful presents were received by the bride and groom, including a gold watch, silver and glassware, table cutlery, linen, etc.

On Thursday evening a reception was held at the home of the groom where many friends assembled to pay their respects to the newly married couple and wish them many happy useful, years together. The New Franklin band of which Mr. Wingert is a member, was present and furnished music for the occasion. The calithumpians were also on hand and made their presence known by an accumulation of noises more loud than musical. An abundance of refreshments were served to all present.

The bride is a member of the Grindstone Hill choir and active in church work. Both are estimable young people and favorably known to a large circle of friends.

The REVIEW is under obligations for a large share of the wedding cake which was excellent indeed.

CHURCH AND SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The Lesson For Sunday, December 29.

The Bible lesson for next Sunday is a review of the lessons of the quarter, and as the lessons have all been interesting and much in them easy to remember it will not be difficult to recall the most stricking facts or events. The chief matter will be to make the proper applications. These can be gathered in a few brief sentences from Bishop Warren's Teaching Points which we take from The Sunday School Times:

The object of study is not to know, but to live better. Biblical history is more interesting than any other, because its application to life is made apparent. It shows "God within the shadow, keeping watch above his own."

1. The way back from sin and affliction by weeping to the Lord, who raised up judges to save them from the hand of those who spoiled them.

2. One Gideon, three hundred soldiers, and God, more than the hosts of Midian. Have courage.

3. The world's best expression of love by Ruth.

4 The Lord comes to the well-born, well-trained, carefully listening Samuel.

5. The good child makes a wise man able to deliver a nation by wisdom and prayer.

6. The kingly qualities of Saul recognized in his being madeking.

7. The kingly qualities being lost, he is deposed.

8. Sensuous pleasures destroy any man's kingly qualities, and depose him from his designed kingdom.

9 To David's kingly qualities ten years of discipline, with the spirit of the Lord upon him daily, are added.

10. Simple human means, made effective by simple trust in God, enable any David to slay any Goliath.

11. There is an affection that is stronger than any love of life. This was a necessity to David's life and success. No needed thing is withheld.

12. The world's joy and the news of it break out of the heavens.

† Any life that starts from its alienation from God by weeping will find its way to empireship, to mastery of all defying giants, to love like the essence of God, and, therefore, to God himself.

WOMAN'S HOUR.

SOMETHING TO INTEREST OUR MOTHERS, WIVES AND SWEETHEARTS.

Household Hints—A Bit of Fashion—Humor and Other Items of Note For The Fair Sex.

A stranger called at the millinery store of Ada Meredith in Huntingdon Tuesday afternoon of last week and asked her if she could give him a five dollar bill for silver. She consented and he placed the five dollar bill in an envelope, and was about giving her the change in silver when he said that he hadn't enough within five cents. He handed her back the envelope and said he would go and get the required amount. When Miss Meredith opened the envelope she discovered that instead of giving her back the envelope in which he placed the five dollar note he had given her another in which was nothing but a piece of paper, or else by slight of hand he had not put the five dollar bill in the envelope he had showed her.

How to set the table.—Have something green for a centre-piece.

A growing plant is better in many ways than cut flowers.

Water in a decanter or carafe is cleaner and easier to serve than in a pitcher. If the family is large and given to drink, and the hired girl has everything to do, a carafe on each corner of the table may be ornamental as well as useful.

The ordinary butter-plate is a little nuisance. Use plates big enough to hold the roll as well as the butter.

Have as many forks at each plate as there are "soft" dishes, which includes fish, vegetables and pastry; and as many knives as there are meats, butter included.

A "cover" includes a plate of any size or design to protect the table from the steaming-hot soup course, from two to five forks, between two and four knives, a couple of teaspoons, a water goblet and wineglasses, napkin and a bread and butter plate.

Inventions By Women;—The spinning of silk was first done by a Chinese woman. Lace making on pillows was the invention of Barbara Uttman in Germany, three hundred years ago, at a time when the country was on the verge of financial ruin. The art spread with great rapidity, and so much money was brought into the country by this means that the trouble was averted. It is still a source of much wealth to the country. The horseshoe machine, which turns out a shoe every three minutes, was also a woman's work.

Mrs. W. H. H. Manning and Elizabeth Smith, both of New Jersey, have made their mark in the world by inventing and improving agricultural implements. The paper pail, rotary loom furnace for smelting ore, screw crank for steamers, fire escape, self-fastening button, danger signals, and many others all originated in the fertile brain of woman. To these must be added many improvements in sewing machines and their attachments, one especially being of much value, that is an adaptation of machines for sewing leather, which is of much use in harness making.

The deep-sea telescope was invented by Mrs. Mather, and perfected by her daughter. By its use wrecks can be inspected, and the bottoms of large vessels seen, without bringing them into the dry dock. Miss Maggie Knight saw the need of a handy paper bag, and invented the satchel-bottom bag. This idea was patented, and she is said to have refused $50,000 for it.

The Eureka street sweeper owes its origin to a woman, who was tired of being spattered with mud while the streets were being cleaned by the clumsy sweeper then in use. Harriet Hosmer has succeeded in producing marble from limestone. This invention scientists consider one of the most important discoveries of the age.

Miss E. S. Hutchins, of Big Rapids, Mich., has received a patent on a pneumatic bicycle tire that differs from all others in the fact that in the center of the rim is fitted a small tire of leather which is encircled by the rubber tire. It is claimed that this adds greatly to the durability of the tire without sacrificing either elasticity or lightness.

The Great Physician.

The room was cheerful, well lighted, and well ventilated, three important requisites to make a Mission room attractive. The singing, led (not drowned) by an organ, was soulful and inspiring; another attraction good for any place. "Hark! from the tombs a doleful sound," may be good in some places, but "Throw out the life-line," is much more appropriate for a Gospel life-saving station. The room was well filled with an audience that would have convinced the most skeptical that there was at least one place where extremes met. Here wealth came to worship and poverty to pray, and over all the good God watched to bestow a blessing on each. Broadcloth found its opposite in rags, while the sober, redeemed man sat side by side with the poor fellow out of whom the demon of drink had not yet been cast. The trophies of grace and the victims of sin were neighbors, occupying the same pew, while the conductor of the meeting was a magnificent specimen of what the power of God could do to make a sober and bright-faced Christian out of a drunken and profane sinner. Wonderfully saved himself, he was wonderfully in earnest to save others.

Such testimonies as were given there! One of the speakers had been in prison a score of times, for all sorts of offences, and several had occupied a cell more than once. Many had been thieves, and with one or two exceptions, all had been drunkards. Saved! The angels themselves seemed to join in the songs of praise, that between the testimonies, came from the very souls of those who had been thus redeemed.

In the midst of this thrilling scene, through the door came a boy carrying a boot-black's kit, and leading a man by the hand, and it was easily seen that drink had another victim in that man. He dropped in a vacant seat in the far rear, but the boy, putting down his kit in front of the man, marched up the aisle until he stood in front of the leader. As the song ceased, he looked up into the smiling face and said with a trembling voice, "Please sir, is the physician in?" "The physician! what physician, my lad?" "Why, sir, the great physician. My partner down there is in an awful bad way. He can't leave drink alone, and yet he wants to. He told me he'd give a hundred dollars if he could go even one day and not touch it. He's been to doctors, but he goes right on drinking and getting worse every day. I was wondering what I could do, when a few moments ago, after telling a lady about it, she told me the only one who could cure him was the great physician, and she said I would find him here in the Mission. Oh, sir, is he in? My partner has got lots of money, and can pay well, and I've saved up some money, and I'll give all I've got if the great physician will only cure my partner. Please tell me, is he in?"

The tears were coursing down the boy's cheeks, and there were but few dry eyes in the room, The leader's voice was choked with emotion as he said earnestly:

"Yes, my boy, the Great Physician is here, and he can cure your partner, without price. I was a drunkard for more than twenty years, and he cured me on the spot where you stand two years seven months and eighteen days ago about nine o'clock in the evening and what he did for me, he did for many others here. Didn't he, boys?"

"Yes! Glory to God, he did," was the quick response. The boy looked around at the company of saved men, and his own face beamed as bright as theirs as he said:

"Oh! I am so glad. My partner is the best fellow in all the world, and he's been so good to me. I began blacking his boots two years ago, and one day when I was giving him a shine, he saw me crying, and asked me what was the matter, and when I told him mother was dead, and I did not know what we could do about burying her, he went right along with me and got a splendid coffin, and had her buried in a beautiful lot, and had a nice stone put up. Then he found a good home for Katie, my sister, and bought me a nice chair for people to sit in while I shined their boots, and he said we would be partners. Just think how proud I was to have a rich man the partner of a boot-black only fourteen years old. The business has been good, but, oh, if my partner can only get cured of his drinking, I'll feel as if I had done something for one who has been so good to me and Katie, and who got such a nice coffin for mother. Please, sir, won't the Great Physician cure him right away?" And as the boy asked this question, he ran back to where his partner sat, to lead him up to the front. He was well dressed, and save for the marks of drink had a noble-looking face. His hat had fallen off and his head rested heavily on his hands, as the boy gently approached him and in a melodious voice, half whispered:

"Yes, partner, he is here, and this man says he can cure you."

The man looked up at the leader, who had followed the boy, and said:

"Who is this Great Physician, and what is his name?"

"His name is Jesus, and he is here to cure and save all that come unto him."

And then the leader told him the story of the Christ, in a tender, simple way, and as he talked, the man and boy listened intently, and suddenly the boy said:

"Oh, partner, maybe he can save me from getting what you've got, while he is curing you of what ails you."

His partner's eyes filled with tears.

"Yes, Willie, he can do that. My mother told me of this Jesus when I was a boy, and if I had only let him save me when I was your age, I'd not have to be cured now. Come, little fellow, we'll be partners in this as well as the business, and God helping us, I'll be cured of what I've got, and you'll be saved from getting it."

That night was a wonderful one in the Mission, for the partners were both saved. Willie graduated from the bootblack's trade to the counting room of his partner, and they are partners still, both in temporal and spiritual things.—Rev. C. H. Mead, in The Christian Herald.

Our Girls Growing Taller.—The Philadelphia Times says: There are indications that the American woman is gradually growing taller and larger, says an authority. Certainly there are more tall girls in Philadelphia than ever before. A few years ago the fashionable skirt length taken to the fashionable dress-making establishments was 42 inches, and 42 inches was the length used for all the model gowns sent over to Paris. The model length has now increased to 45 inches, and the increase in other measurements is in proportion. The middle-aged American woman shows an inclination to grow broader across the hips and shoulders, and stouter and thicker through the arms, but the college graduate, the university woman, and the debutante grow more gracefully vigorous every year. The typical college graduate is from two to four inches longer from the waist down than formerly. Her waist is getting longer, her chest fuller, and her limbs narrower. The middle-aged women grow corpulent and clumsy through indolence and indulgent habits of life, while the ever-increasing tendency toward athletic sports and out-door exercise is improving the younger of the sex. The statuesque Juno type may yet express the American women.

Webster's International Dictionary

Invaluable in Office, School, and Home

Successor of the "Unabridged."

Standard of the U. S. Gov't Printing Office, the U. S. Supreme Court, and of nearly all the Schoolbooks.

Warmly commended by State Superintendents of Schools, and other Educators almost without number.

THE BEST FOR EVERYBODY BECAUSE

It is easy to find the word wanted. Words are given their correct alphabetical places, each one beginning a paragraph.

It is easy to ascertain the pronunciation. The pronunciation is shown by the ordinary diacritically marked letters used in the schoolbooks.

It is easy to trace the growth of a word. The etymologies are full, and the different meanings are given in the order of their development.

It is easy to learn what a word means. The definitions are clear, explicit, and full, and each is contained in a separate paragraph.
